This creation was a collaborative effort by Midori Fuchs, Kristina Cakova, and ChatGPT as part of their Digital Storytelling Workshop project.

The story was subsequently adapted into both a book and a video format. Instruction on how to create a video and a book will be given further on in the book.

"Kaldi's Enchanted Journey: A Tale of Coffee's Wondrous Past"

My name is Kaldi, and I am a young and curious goat living in a hidden grove atop a majestic Ethiopian mountain range. Every day, I explore the enchanting world around me, filled with vibrant flowers, animated plants, and talking animals. There's never a dull moment in this magical place!

One day, as I was frolicking through the grove, my curiosity led me to a patch of bright red berries on a peculiar plant. The aroma was irresistible, so I decided to nibble on a few berries. To my astonishment, I felt a burst of energy and excitement coursing through my veins. The world around me transformed into a kaleidoscope of colors, and the once-still flowers began swaying gently in the breeze. It was like stepping into a whole new dimension!

In the midst of this magical transformation, I saw Bella, a wise and nurturing bird, who had been watching me all along. With her soft, melodic voice, she revealed the incredible secret of those berries—they were enchanted coffee beans! I couldn't believe my ears. Coffee beans with magical powers? This was beyond my wildest dreams!

From that moment on, I became the guardian of the grove, entrusted with the responsibility of preserving the enchanted coffee beans. Bella and I embarked on an extraordinary journey through time, exploring the captivating history of coffee.

But little did I know, there was a mischievous fox named Ferlin lurking in the shadows. He was jealous of the magic within the enchanted beans and desired their power for himself. Ferlin was determined to steal the beans and claim their enchantment as his own. I had no idea what challenges awaited us.

As Bella and I began our adventure, I sensed a presence following us. It was Ferlin, trying to outwit us and snatch the enchanted beans. He set traps and obstacles along our path, hoping to deter us from our mission. But I was not easily discouraged. My curiosity pushed me forward, eager to unravel the mysteries of coffee's history.

Our first stop was ancient Ethiopia, where Bella revealed the fascinating tale of the coffee discovery. I learned about a goat herder named Kaldi—just like me! He had stumbled upon these magical beans centuries ago. My heart swelled with pride, knowing that I shared a name and a connection with this legendary figure.

In the ancient Ethiopian village, Ferlin unleashed his mischief, causing chaos during the monks' prayer time. But I couldn't stand idle while Ferlin disrupted the serene atmosphere. With quick thinking and agile movements, I helped the monks chase him away, restoring peace to the village. The people hailed me as a hero, and I felt a sense of purpose in protecting the magical powers of coffee.

Undeterred by Ferlin's tricks, Bella and I journeyed to Arabian markets, where the air was filled with a mix of suspense and aroma. The markets were bustling with activity, and the scent of coffee tickled my nostrils. I was excited to learn more about the wonders of coffee in this vibrant land.

Bella shared captivating stories of how coffee had spread from Ethiopia to Arabia, becoming an integral part of the culture. We encountered bustling coffeehouses, where people gathered to share tales, engage in passionate debates, and savor the aromatic brew. It was a world of surprises, where coffee brought joy and sparked conversations among friends and strangers alike.

With each new revelation, I grew more amazed by the power of coffee. It was a magical elixir that connected people, bridging gaps and fostering unity.

Our journey continued to Europe, where the Renaissance period was in full swing. Bella and I marveled at the opening of the first coffeehouse in Venice. Suspense filled the air as we entered this realm of art and ideas.

But amidst the wonders of Venice, a plot twist unfolded that took us by surprise. As we entered the bustling coffeehouse, I noticed a figure lurking in the shadows—a mysterious character with a mischievous smile. It was none other than Ferlin, the sly fox who had been tailing us all along!

Ferlin had anticipated our arrival and devised a cunning plan. With a flick of his tail, he summoned his henchmen—a group of misfit animals who shared his wicked intentions. They ambushed us, snatching the enchanted coffee beans from our grasp.

My heart sank with a mix of disappointment and determination. How could we have been outsmarted by Ferlin? But I wasn't ready to give up. I couldn't let him misuse the magic of the beans for his selfish desires.

Bella and I rallied our courage and set off on a daring chase through the labyrinthine streets of Venice. We navigated narrow alleys, leaped across bridges, and ducked beneath market stalls, our determination fueling our every step. Ferlin's henchmen were fast, but we were driven by a stronger purpose—to protect the legacy of coffee.

After a suspenseful pursuit, we cornered Ferlin and his gang at the edge of a picturesque canal. A standoff ensued, and it seemed like all hope was lost. But just when it appeared that Ferlin would escape, a surprise ally emerged from the shadows—a wise old owl named Orion.

Orion, having observed our journey, recognized the value of the enchanted coffee beans. With his vast knowledge and ancient wisdom, he cast a spell that momentarily immobilized Ferlin and his henchmen. It was a twist of fate that shifted the balance in our favor.

Seizing the opportunity, Bella and I swiftly retrieved the enchanted coffee beans and huddled together. Orion's eyes sparkled with a mixture of pride and satisfaction. He had not only helped us in our time of need but also passed down his wisdom and entrusted us with the responsibility to protect coffee's magic.

Filled with gratitude, I thanked Orion for his timely intervention. With our mission accomplished, we bid farewell to our newfound ally and returned to the grove atop the Ethiopian mountains.

Back in our enchanted haven, Bella and I celebrated our victory. The magical coffee beans were safe once again, and the grove resonated with a sense of tranquility. We reveled in the knowledge that the enchantment of coffee would continue to inspire and bring people together.

From that day forward, I embraced my role as the guardian of coffee's magical history. The journey had taught me the power of curiosity, the importance of unity, and the resilience of the human spirit. And although Ferlin had been vanquished for now, I knew that the world was vast, and there were still countless tales to uncover and surprises to unravel.

So, with a heart full of wonder and a spirit that yearned for adventure, I stood tall as Kaldi, the goat who had witnessed the magic of coffee and vowed to protect its story for generations to come. And together with Bella by my side, we continued to explore the enchanting world, ready to unravel more secrets and share the wonders of coffee with all who would listen.

Background Information

- Can you tell me what are the most important milestones in history of coffee?

Certainly! The history of coffee is rich and spans several centuries. Here are some of the most important milestones in the history of coffee:

9th century: Discovery of Coffee: Legend has it that coffee was discovered by an Ethiopian goatherd named Kaldi. He noticed his goats becoming energetic after eating berries from a certain plant and shared this discovery with local monks.

15th century: Coffee in the Arabian Peninsula: Coffee cultivation and consumption began to spread in the Arabian Peninsula, particularly in Yemen. The first coffeehouses, known as qahveh khaneh, were established, serving as social and intellectual gathering places.

17th century: Introduction of Coffee to Europe: Coffee was introduced to Europe through trade routes, with the first coffeehouse opening in Venice, Italy in 1645. Coffeehouses quickly became popular gathering places for intellectuals and artists.

18th century: Coffee Plantations in the Americas: European colonial powers established coffee plantations in their colonies in the Americas, particularly in Brazil and the Caribbean. This led to the expansion of coffee production and the rise of coffee as a major global commodity.

19th century: Industrialization and Coffee Consumption: The Industrial Revolution brought advancements in coffee processing, including the invention of the coffee percolator and the commercialization of instant coffee. This made coffee more accessible and affordable for a larger population.

20th century: Specialty Coffee Movement: The rise of specialty coffee emerged in the mid-20th century, emphasizing the quality, origin, and unique flavors of coffee. This movement led to the establishment of independent coffee shops, artisanal roasters, and the popularity of espresso-based drinks.

21st century: Sustainable and Ethical Coffee: Increasing awareness of environmental and social issues led to a focus on sustainable and ethically sourced coffee. Fair trade and organic certifications gained prominence, ensuring better working conditions for farmers and promoting environmentally friendly practices.

These milestones represent key moments in the global spread, cultural significance, and technological advancements surrounding coffee throughout history.

Creating unique voices

- Suggest to me how to develop a unique voice for Kaldi

To develop a unique voice for Kaldi, the adventurous goat in "Kaldi's Magical Beans," you can consider the following characteristics and techniques:

1. Playful Language: Infuse Kaldi's dialogue with a sense of playfulness and curiosity. Use words and phrases that reflect his youthful energy and enthusiasm for exploration. For example, he could use expressions like "Let's bounce through the grove!" or "We're on a trail of endless wonders!"

2. Expressive Descriptions: Describe Kaldi's observations and experiences in vivid detail. Use sensory language to convey his awe and excitement. For instance, instead of saying, "The flowers are pretty," he might exclaim, "Wow! The flowers are like a rainbow painted by nature, with petals that dance in the breeze!"

3. Imaginative Comparisons: Kaldi's imaginative nature can be reflected through the use of creative comparisons. Encourage him to see connections between different things, such as comparing the aroma of coffee to the scent of a secret forest or describing the taste of coffee as a burst of flavors like a symphony on his tongue.

4. Expressing Wonder: Have Kaldi express wonder and awe at the magic of the coffee beans and the enchanted world around him. His voice should reflect his fascination with the extraordinary. He might use phrases like, "Can you believe it? The coffee beans turned our world into a marvelous kaleidoscope of dreams!"

5. Natural Goat Traits: Incorporate elements of goat behavior and mannerisms into Kaldi's voice. For instance, he might use playful bleats or make goat-related puns. This can add a touch of charm and authenticity to his character.

6. Catchphrases: Develop a signature catchphrase or expression that Kaldi frequently uses throughout the story. This can be a unique phrase that encapsulates his adventurous spirit or reflects his connection to the coffee beans. For example, he could say, "Wherever the coffee beans lead, let's follow with hooves held high!"

Remember, consistency is key when developing a unique voice for Kaldi. Pay attention to his speech patterns, vocabulary, and mannerisms to ensure his voice remains distinct and true to his character throughout the story.

Writing the Story

- Based on all the information above, please write a detailed, slow-paced, two page children's story

Once upon a time, nestled in a hidden grove atop a majestic Ethiopian mountain range, there lived a young and curious goat named Kaldi. Kaldi's eyes shimmered with wonder as he explored the enchanted world around him, filled with vibrant flowers, animated plants, and talking animals. One day, while frolicking through the grove, Kaldi stumbled upon a patch of bright red berries on a peculiar plant. Intrigued by their aroma, he nibbled on a few berries and, to his astonishment, felt a burst of energy and excitement. The world around him transformed into a kaleidoscope of colors, and the once-still flowers swayed gently in the breeze.

In the midst of this magical transformation, Kaldi's eyes met Bella, a wise and nurturing bird who had witnessed his discovery. With a soft, melodic voice, Bella explained the incredible secret of these berries—they were enchanted coffee beans! Kaldi, now the guardian of the grove, was destined for a remarkable journey through time and coffee's amazing story.

Bella, spreading her wings gracefully, led Kaldi through a shimmering portal to ancient Ethiopia. They arrived in a peaceful village, where kind-hearted monks carefully brewed coffee to keep their spirits awake during long hours of prayer. Kaldi marveled at their devotion and the way coffee brought them together in warm companionship.

Leaving Ethiopia, Kaldi and Bella continued their journey to bustling Arabian markets. The air was thick with the rich aroma of coffee, and the sound of lively conversations filled the coffeehouses.

Kaldi and Bella met friendly traders who shared tales of how coffee had spread from Ethiopia, enchanting the hearts and minds of people from all walks of life.

Across the vast oceans they sailed, reaching the shores of Europe. In Venice, they witnessed the grand opening of the first coffeehouse, where people gathered to discuss ideas, play games, and savor the mysterious drink. Kaldi watched in awe as the aroma of freshly brewed coffee danced through the air, inviting laughter and conversation.

The adventurous duo then found themselves amidst the lush coffee plantations of the Americas. They met hardworking farmers who nurtured the coffee plants with love and care. Kaldi ran through the fields, marveling at the bright red cherries that held the beans of joy within them. He learned how coffee had become a beacon of hope and prosperity for the people of these lands.

As their journey unfolded, Kaldi and Bella discovered that coffee was enjoyed in unique ways around the world. They witnessed the elaborate Ethiopian coffee ceremonies, where family and friends gathered to celebrate life's moments. In Europe, they embraced the café culture, sipping coffee while engaging in conversations and creative pursuits. They even explored the emerging trend of specialty coffee, where artisans crafted exquisite flavors for discerning palates.

Filled with gratitude and a deep appreciation for the enchanting world of coffee, Kaldi and Bella returned to the enchanted grove. They understood that coffee held a magical power—a power to bring people together, to foster friendships, and to create moments of joy and connection. Kaldi, with a twinkle in his eye, shared the stories they had learned with the villagers, spreading happiness and curiosity for the wonders of coffee.

And so, dear children, as you sip your warm cup of coffee, remember the magical journey of Kaldi and the enchanted grove. Let the spirit of adventure and the joy of discovery fill your hearts, for coffee's story is a tale of wonder, friendship, and the remarkable power of a tiny bean.

- Please adjust this story so that it also has a conflict and an antagonist

Once upon a time, nestled in a hidden grove atop a majestic Ethiopian mountain range, there lived a young and curious goat named Kaldi. Kaldi's eyes shimmered with wonder as he explored the enchanted world around him, filled with vibrant flowers, animated plants, and talking animals. One day, while frolicking through the grove, Kaldi stumbled upon a patch of bright red berries on a peculiar plant. With a soft, melodic voice, Bella explained the incredible secret of these berries—they were enchanted coffee beans! Kaldi, now the guardian of the grove, was destined for a remarkable journey through time and coffee's amazing story.

But little did Kaldi know, there was a mischievous character lurking in the shadows—a sly fox named Ferlin. Ferlin had been watching from afar, his eyes filled with envy. He desired the power and magic of the enchanted coffee beans for himself and devised a plan to steal them.

As Kaldi and Bella embarked on their adventure, Ferlin followed them stealthily, determined to get his paws on the enchanted beans. He set traps and obstacles along their path, hoping to discourage them and claim the beans for his own devious purposes.

In ancient Ethiopia, as the monks brewed their coffee, Ferlin stirred up mischief by knocking over their cups and causing chaos. Kaldi, with his quick wit, helped the monks chase away Ferlin and restore harmony to the prayer-filled air.

Undeterred, Ferlin continued to hound Kaldi and Bella, causing disturbances in Arabian markets and European coffeehouses. He attempted to create doubt and divide among people, hoping to steal their joy and appreciation for coffee's magic.

But Kaldi and Bella remained resilient, spreading love and knowledge wherever they went. They formed alliances with the kind-hearted traders and the café owners, who saw through Ferlin's trickery and joined forces to protect the enchanted coffee beans.

As Kaldi and Bella ventured to the vibrant coffee plantations of the Americas, Ferlin's mischievous acts escalated. He tried to disrupt the harmony among the farmers and create chaos in the fields. Yet, the resilient spirit of unity prevailed, and the farmers, along with Kaldi and Bella, worked together to overcome Ferlin's attempts and safeguard the precious coffee beans.

With each challenge, Kaldi grew stronger, and his bond with Bella deepened. Together, they outsmarted Ferlin at every turn, spreading joy, friendship, and knowledge about coffee's incredible journey.

Finally, the day came when Kaldi and Bella returned to the enchanted grove. Ferlin, filled with frustration and defeat, confronted them one last time. But in a heartwarming display of unity, the animals of the grove, whom Kaldi had befriended during his journey, stood together against Ferlin, driving him away with their collective strength and unwavering love for the enchanted coffee beans. And so, dear children, as you sip your warm cup of coffee, remember the magical journey of Kaldi, Bella, and the enchanted grove. It is a tale of wonder, friendship, and the resilience to overcome adversity. Let the spirit of adventure and the joy of discovery fill your hearts, for coffee's story is not just about magic—it is about the triumph of goodness over mischief and the power of unity in the face of conflict.

In the midst of this magical transformation, Kaldi's eyes met Bella, a wise and nurturing bird who had witnessed his discovery. With a soft, melodic voice, Bella explained the incredible secret of these berries—they were enchanted coffee beans! Kaldi, now the guardian of the grove, was destined for a remarkable journey through time and coffee's amazing story.

But little did Kaldi know, there was a mischievous character lurking in the shadows—a sly fox named Ferlin. He had heard whispers of the magical beans and desired their power for himself. Ferlin devised a cunning plan to steal the enchanted coffee beans and claim their enchantment as his own. As Kaldi and Bella embarked on their adventure, Ferlin followed them stealthily, determined to get his paws on the enchanted beans. He set traps and obstacles along their path, hoping to discourage them and claim the beans for his own devious purposes.

Their first stop was ancient Ethiopia, where Bella explained to Kaldi the rich history of coffee. They witnessed the discovery of coffee by a goat herder named Kaldi, just like him! Kaldi's eyes widened with amazement as Bella described how the berries were taken to monks who brewed them into a magical drink, keeping them awake during long hours of prayer.

With curiosity in his heart, Kaldi asked Bella, "What makes these beans so special?"

Bella smiled and replied, "Ah, my dear Kaldi, these enchanted coffee beans hold a secret power. They bring people together, inspire creativity, and awaken the senses."

With newfound excitement, Kaldi continued his journey, eager to learn more about the surprises that coffee held.

In the ancient Ethiopian village, as the monks brewed their coffee, Ferlin stirred up mischief by knocking over their cups and causing chaos. Kaldi, with his quick wit and determination, helped the monks chase away Ferlin and restore harmony to the prayer-filled air. The people recognized Kaldi as a hero, and he became a symbol of the magical powers of coffee.

As Kaldi and Bella traveled to Arabian markets, they were met with a sense of suspense. The bustling markets were filled with the intoxicating aroma of coffee, and Kaldi couldn't help but wonder what awaited them in this vibrant land.

Bella shared tales of how coffee spread from Ethiopia to Arabia, captivating the hearts and taste buds of people far and wide. Kaldi and Bella marveled at the bustling coffeehouses, where people gathered to share stories, engage in lively debates, and savor the aromatic brew. They met friendly traders who shared tales of the wonders of coffee and its cultural significance.

With surprise in his eyes, Kaldi exclaimed, "Coffee brings people together in joy and conversation!"

Bella nodded and said, "Indeed, dear Kaldi. Coffee has a way of bridging gaps and creating connections among people from all walks of life."

Their journey continued to Europe, where they witnessed the opening of the first coffeehouse in Venice. Suspense filled the air as Kaldi and Bella wondered how coffee would be received in this new land of art and ideas

My name is Kaldi, and I am a young and curious goat living in a hidden grove atop a majestic Ethiopian mountain range. Every day, I explore the enchanting world around me, filled with vibrant flowers, animated plants, and talking animals. There's never a dull moment in this magical place!

One day, as I was frolicking through the grove, my curiosity led me to a patch of bright red berries on a peculiar plant. The aroma was irresistible, so I decided to nibble on a few berries. To my astonishment, I felt a burst of energy and excitement coursing through my veins. The world around me transformed into a kaleidoscope of colors, and the once-still flowers began swaying gently in the breeze. It was like stepping into a whole new dimension!

In the midst of this magical transformation, I saw Bella, a wise and nurturing bird, who had been watching me all along. With her soft, melodic voice, she revealed the incredible secret of those berries—they were enchanted coffee beans! I couldn't believe my ears. Coffee beans with magical powers? This was beyond my wildest dreams!

From that moment on, I became the guardian of the grove, entrusted with the responsibility of preserving the enchanted coffee beans. Bella and I embarked on an extraordinary journey through time, exploring the captivating history of coffee.

But little did I know, there was a mischievous fox named Ferlin lurking in the shadows. He was jealous of the magic within the enchanted beans and desired their power for himself. Ferlin was determined to steal the beans and claim their enchantment as his own. I had no idea what challenges awaited us.

As Bella and I began our adventure, I sensed a presence following us. It was Ferlin, trying to outwit us and snatch the enchanted beans. He set traps and obstacles along our path, hoping to deter us from our mission. But I was not easily discouraged. My curiosity pushed me forward, eager to unravel the mysteries of coffee's history.

Our first stop was ancient Ethiopia, where Bella revealed the fascinating tale of the coffee discovery. I learned about a goat herder named Kaldi—just like me! He had stumbled upon these magical beans centuries ago. My heart swelled with pride, knowing that I shared a name and a connection with this legendary figure.

In the ancient Ethiopian village, Ferlin unleashed his mischief, causing chaos during the monks' prayer time. But I couldn't stand idle while Ferlin disrupted the serene atmosphere. With quick thinking and agile movements, I helped the monks chase him away, restoring peace to the village. The people hailed me as a hero, and I felt a sense of purpose in protecting the magical powers of coffee.

Undeterred by Ferlin's tricks, Bella and I journeyed to Arabian markets, where the air was filled with a mix of suspense and aroma. The markets were bustling with activity, and the scent of coffee tickled my nostrils. I was excited to learn more about the wonders of coffee in this vibrant land.

Bella shared captivating stories of how coffee had spread from Ethiopia to Arabia, becoming an integral part of the culture. We encountered bustling coffeehouses, where people gathered to share tales, engage in passionate debates, and savor the aromatic brew. It was a world of surprises, where coffee brought joy and sparked conversations among friends and strangers alike.

With each new revelation, I grew more amazed by the power of coffee. It was a magical elixir that connected people, bridging gaps and fostering unity.

Our journey continued to Europe, where the Renaissance period was in full swing. Bella and I marveled at the opening of the first coffeehouse in Venice. Suspense filled the air as we entered this realm of art, ideas, and

But amidst the wonders of Venice, a plot twist unfolded that took us by surprise. As we entered the bustling coffeehouse, I noticed a figure lurking in the shadows—a mysterious character with a mischievous smile. It was none other than Ferlin, the sly fox who had been tailing us all along!

Ferlin had anticipated our arrival and devised a cunning plan. With a flick of his tail, he summoned his henchmen—a group of misfit animals who shared his wicked intentions. They ambushed us, snatching the enchanted coffee beans from our grasp.

My heart sank with a mix of disappointment and determination. How could we have been outsmarted by Ferlin? But I wasn't ready to give up. I couldn't let him misuse the magic of the beans for his selfish desires.

Bella and I rallied our courage and set off on a daring chase through the labyrinthine streets of Venice. We navigated narrow alleys, leaped across bridges, and ducked beneath market stalls, our determination fueling our every step. Ferlin's henchmen were fast, but we were driven by a stronger purpose—to protect the legacy of coffee.

After a suspenseful pursuit, we cornered Ferlin and his gang at the edge of a picturesque canal. A standoff ensued, and it seemed like all hope was lost. But just when it appeared that Ferlin would escape, a surprise ally emerged from the shadows—a wise old owl named Orion.

Orion, having observed our journey, recognized the value of the enchanted coffee beans. With his vast knowledge and ancient wisdom, he cast a spell that momentarily immobilized Ferlin and his henchmen. It was a twist of fate that shifted the balance in our favor.

Seizing the opportunity, Bella and I swiftly retrieved the enchanted coffee beans and huddled together. Orion's eyes sparkled with a mixture of pride and satisfaction. He had not only helped us in our time of need but also passed down his wisdom and entrusted us with the responsibility to protect coffee's magic.

Filled with gratitude, I thanked Orion for his timely intervention. With our mission accomplished, we bid farewell to our newfound ally and returned to the grove atop the Ethiopian mountains.

Back in our enchanted haven, Bella and I celebrated our victory. The magical coffee beans were safe once again, and the grove resonated with a sense of tranquility. We reveled in the knowledge that the enchantment of coffee would continue to inspire and bring people together.

From that day forward, I embraced my role as the guardian of coffee's magical history. The journey had taught me the power of curiosity, the importance of unity, and the resilience of the human spirit. And although Ferlin had been vanquished for now, I knew that the world was vast, and there were still countless tales to uncover and surprises to unravel.

So, with a heart full of wonder and a spirit that yearned for adventure, I stood tall as Kaldi, the goat who had witnessed the magic of coffee and vowed to protect its story for generations to come. And together with Bella by my side, we continued to explore the enchanting world, ready to unravel more secrets and share the wonders of coffee with all who would listen.

Project Rationalization

Video Production

Our final video is based on our first story about coffee history, called "Kaldi's Enchanted Journey: A Tale of Coffee's Wondrous Past". The script for this video was created via ChatGPT, by asking it to write a one minute video script based on the story mentioned above. Afterwards, the script has similarly been used for narration of the video. The narration itself, composed of transferring the script-text to NaturalReaders.com website, where we could choose our narrator as well as their tone of the voice. We opted for a child narrator as we wanted to make our spectator feel involved, like they are listening to one of their friends. Once we had our narration, we moved our process to Canva.com, which we chose as the main cutting and production platform. As Canva offers clear video design, it was easy for us to work with it. The next step was to generate images for our video to come to life. For this part of the project, we worked on Adobe Firefly \(Beta\) website, where we could choose from many styles, sizes and content types. Adobe Firefly wasn't restricted by a particular number of available prompts per day, which made our work more time-efficient. Once we had all of the pictures needed to represent the story and to match with the narrator, we adjusted the length of each scene, for a final story look to come together. However, we didn't stop here, as we believed our video story lacked something, specific atmosphere. To evoke a sense of imagination in the viewer, we decided to include a subtle background music to the narration. We opted for a melody with a soft rhythm called "inspiration", retrieved from Pixabay.com. All in all, once we fused these various elements, a video story was formed.

Story writing & Book production

The basis of our portfolio are our stories, without them we wouldn't be able to create the books or the video. To be able to form quality stories, we have adopted following approach. With each story, we firstly asked ChatGPT about the topic, to understand what information we are working with, and what we can expect our stories to include. Such background information allowed us to extend our subsequent prompts. Then, we moved on specifics, with the goal to start developing atmosphere around the story. The most used prompts include:

- Developing a story-world
- Outlining a mood-board
- Developing characters and main character's unique voice
- Outlining the book story
- Adjusting the story-world - adding conflict and an antagonist, or a plot twist
- Adjusting the story-world - adding suspense, curiosity and surprise
- Rewriting the story - e.g. from main character's point of view

Once each story was finalised by ChatGPT, we recorded our processes, transporting every prompt and its answer to a singular document (which is included in the portfolio, in separate document.)

Once we had our stories, we were able to move onto the book production process. We used Canva as our main platform to bring the books to life. Thanks to internet research, we found out which format would be most suitable for book design. Because of this format, the pages of our books resembled real ones.

Necessary basis of every children book are pictures. To complete ours, we used Adobe Firefly(Beta) once again, due to its speed and clarity. After placing all images together on the book pages, we added the text of our stories. The font we used for the text is KG Primary Penmanship, as the research showed us that this is the most used and appropriate font to use in children's books. All in all, we believe the books represent the stories we created rightfully.
